CLASS ACTION

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

PLAINTIFFS' NOTICE OF SUPPLEMENTAL AUTHORITY

Plaintiffs hereby submit as supplemental authority the Order Denying Defendant's Motion to Compel Arbitration and Granting in Part considering and Denying in Part Defendant's Motion to Dismiss in Carwile v. Samsung Telecommunications America, L.L.C., Case. No. CV 12-05660-CJC (JRPx) (C.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2013), attached hereto as Exhibit 1. According to Defendant Samsung, the Carwile complaint "is virtually identical to the Complaint filed in" the Shane Galitski v. Samsung Telecommunications America, LLC litigation. Carwile v. Samsung Telecomm., C.D. Cal., Civ. No. 2:12-CV-05660-CJC (JRPx), Motion to Dismiss Class Action Complaint, ECF No. 17, Sept. 10, 2012. For the reasons in the Carwile order, as well as the reasons set forth in the Plaintiffs' responsive papers, Samsung's Motion to Compel Arbitration and Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO COMPEL
ARBITRATION AND GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

I. INTRODUCTION & BACKGROUND

On June 29, 2012, Plaintiff Laura Carwile, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated, filed this putative class action lawsuit against Defendant Samsung Telecommunications America, LLC ("Samsung"). Ms. Carwile asserts eight claims related to an alleged defect of a Galaxy S mobile phone manufactured by Samsung: (1) strict liability design defect; (2) breach of contract; (3) breach of express warranty; (4) breach of implied warranty; (5) violation of the Song-Beverly Warranty Act, California Civil Code § 1792 et seq.; (6) violation of the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, 15 U.S.C.

1 § 2301 et seq.; (7) violation of the California Unfair Competition Law (“UCL”),
2 California Business & Professions Code § 17200 et seq.; and (8) assumpsit and quasi-
3 contract. (Dkt. No. 1 [“Compl.”].) Ms. Carwile purchased the Galaxy S phone on 4 December 6, 2011 at a Sprint Store in La Habra, California (the “Sprint Store”). (Id. ¶
5 28.) She alleges that approximately six months after purchasing the Galaxy S, the 6 phone began to experience a defect that caused it to freeze and power off when put into 7 standby mode. (Id. ¶¶ 20, 28.) In order to return the phone to normal functioning after 8 the defect has occurred, the phone battery must be removed and reinserted. (Id. ¶ 21.)
9 Ms. Carwile alleges that she attempted to have the phone repaired at the Sprint Store on 10 two separate occasions, yet both attempts at repair were unsuccessful. (Id. ¶ 28.)
11 Presently before the Court are Samsung’s motions to compel arbitration and dismiss the 12 Complaint. (Dkt. Nos. 16, 17.) For the reasons stated below, the Court DENIES 13 Samsung’s motion to compel arbitration and GRANTS IN PART AND DENIES IN 14 PART Samsung’s motion to dismiss.<sup>1</sup>

15 16 II. DISCUSSION

17 18 A. Arbitration

19
20 Samsung contends that Ms. Carwile is compelled to arbitrate her claims pursuant 21 to a service agreement she entered into with Sprint (the “Service Agreement”).
22 Samsung is not a party to the Service Agreement. The Service Agreement provides, in 23 relevant part: “We each agree to finally settle all disputes . . . only by arbitration . . . .”
24 (Pennington Decl., Exh. A [“Service Agreement”] at 14.) “Disputes” are defined as 25 “any claims or controversies against each other related in any way to our Services or the 26

27 <sup>1</sup> Having read and considered the papers presented by the parties, the Court finds this matter
28 appropriate for disposition without a hearing. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 78; Local Rule 7-15. Accordingly, the hearing set for January 28, 2013 at 1:30 p.m. is hereby vacated and off calendar.

1 Agreement, including, but not limited to . . . Devices . . .” (Id.) Ms. Carwile insists
2 that the arbitration provision of the Service Agreement is not binding on her.
3 Nevertheless, even if it is binding, the Service Agreement does not obligate her to 4 arbitrate her claims against Samsung.

5
6 The right to compel arbitration derives from a contractual right, and generally,
7 “[t]hat contractual right may not be invoked by one who is not a party to the agreement
8 and does not otherwise possess the right to compel arbitration.” Britton v. Co-op
9 Banking Group, 4 F.3d 742, 744 (9th Cir. 1993); see also Comedy Club, Inc. v. Improv
10 W. Assocs., 553 F.3d 1277, 1287 (9th Cir. 2009) (“The strong public policy in favor of 11 arbitration does not extend to those who are not parties to an arbitration agreement . . .” 12 (citation and quotes omitted)). As an exception to this general rule, a nonparty to an 13 arbitration agreement may compel a signatory to an arbitration agreement to arbitrate
14 claims in limited circumstances. See Comer v. Micor, Inc., 436 F.3d 1098, 1101 (9th 15 Cir. 2006); Lucas v. Hertz Corp., No. C 11-01581 LB, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86410, at 16 *18 (N.D. Cal. June 21, 2012) (“[A] nonsignatory can enforce an arbitration agreement
17 as a third-party beneficiary. Also, a signatory can be compelled to arbitrate at the non-18 signatory’s insistence under ‘an alternative estoppel theory’ . . .”).

19
20 Here, Samsung argues that Ms. Carwile is obligated to arbitrate her claims under 21 the doctrine of equitable estoppel. The purpose of equitable estoppel is to “preclude[] a 22 party from claiming the benefits of a contract while simultaneously attempting to avoid 23 the burdens that contract imposes.” Mundi v. Union Sec. Life Ins. Co., 555 F.3d 1042, 24 1045 (9th Cir. 2009). In Mundi, a life insurance company defendant attempted to 25 compel an individual plaintiff to arbitration based on a provision contained in a loan 26 agreement between the plaintiff’s decedent and a third party bank. Id. at 1043. The 27 defendant issued the life insurance policy in order to cover the value of the loan. Id. at 28 1044. Following the decedent’s death, the plaintiff filed a claim with the life insurance

1 company in order to pay the outstanding balance on the loan. Id. After the life
2 insurance company denied the claim, the plaintiff brought suit. While the Ninth Circuit
3 recognized that there might be situations where a nonsignatory defendant may compel a 4 signatory plaintiff to arbitrate claims under the doctrine of equitable estoppel, it declined
5 to compel arbitration based on the facts of the case. Specifically, the Ninth Circuit
6 relied on the facts that the plaintiff's claim was not intertwined with the contract
7 providing for arbitration, the claim did not arise out of or relate directly to the contract, 8 the resolution of the claim did not require the examination of any provisions of the 9 contract, the contract did not mention a separate agreement between the plaintiff and 10 defendant, and plaintiff did not allege collusion or misconduct by the other signatory
11 party. Id. at 1047. Courts, including this one, have interpreted Mundi as requiring two 12 factors for a nonsignatory defendant to compel a signatory plaintiff to arbitrate: (1) the 13 claims are intertwined with the contract containing the arbitration provision, and (2)
14 there is a close relationship between the entities involved. See Soto v. Am. Honda
15 Motor Co., Inc., No. C 12-01377 SI, 2012 WL 5877476, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 16 2012); In re Toyota Motor Corp. Hybrid Brake Mktg., 828 F. Supp. 2d 1150, 1160 (C.D.
17 Cal. 2011); In re Apple & AT & TM Antitrust Litig., 826 F. Supp. 2d 1168, 1177 (N.D.
18 Cal. 2011).

20 Samsung argues that equitable estoppel is proper because "without wireless
21 service provided by Sprint, without agreeing to be bound by the terms of the service
22 contract with her wireless carrier, and without allegations of Sprint's conduct, Plaintiff
23 would have no factual basis for this lawsuit." (Def.'s Arb. Mem. at 9.) However, this 24 "but for" connection between Ms. Carwile's claims and Sprint is not sufficient. See In 25 re Toyota Motor Corp. Unintended Acceleration Mktg., 838 F. Supp. 2d 967, 993 (C.D.
26 Cal. 2012) ("Undoubtedly, there is a 'but for' connection between the execution of the 27 purchase agreement and the acquisition of the vehicle . . . . Nevertheless, the [equitable 28 estoppel] inquiry here does not depend on 'but for' causation and is instead more

1 nuanced.”). Here, Ms. Carwile’s claims are not intertwined with any provisions in the 2 Service Agreement. Her claims allege defects with her Samsung phone and rely on 3 Samsung’s warranties, not on any terms or conditions contained in the Service
4 Agreement. Indeed, the Service Agreement explicitly states that Sprint “MAKE[S] NO
5 . . . WARRANTIES, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED . . . CONCERNING YOUR . . .
6 DEVICE.” (Pennington Decl. at 13.) Samsung’s Warranty also provides that “[n]o 7 agent, employee, dealer, representative or reseller is authorized to modify or extend this 8 Limited Warranty . . .” (Dkt. No. 1, Exh. A at 18.) Clearly, the resolution of Ms.
9 Carwile’s claims does not require an examination of the Service Agreement.

11 Neither is there the sort of close relationship between Samsung and Sprint that 12 would support the application of equitable estoppel. Ms. Carwile does not allege that 13 Sprint acted improperly in any way, or that Samsung and Sprint were acting in concert.
14 Samsung’s reliance on Bradford v. Samsung Telecommunications America LLC et. al., 15 No. CV 10-01882 MMM (OPx) (C.D. Cal. July 27, 2011) (slip op.), is misplaced. In 16 Bradford, the court found two bases for compelling a plaintiff to arbitrate his claims
17 against Samsung arising out of an arbitration provision in a service agreement he signed 18 with T-Mobile, his wireless carrier. The plaintiff had originally brought claims against 19 both T-Mobile and Samsung, arguing that they had both misrepresented the upgrade
20 potential of his phone. Id. at 1. The court held that even after the plaintiff dismissed T-
21 Mobile, he was still compelled to arbitrate, both under the terms of the service
22 agreement, and under the doctrine of equitable estoppel. In holding that the doctrine of 23 equitable estoppel compelled arbitration, the court reasoned that the plaintiff alleged 24 interdependent and concerted efforts by the parties to misrepresent the capabilities of 25 the phone. Id. at 12. In fact, the complaint rarely distinguished between the two 26 defendants, and implied that they had been working in concert to deceive consumers.

27 ///

28 ///

1 Id. at n.39. Here, however, Ms. Carwile clearly distinguishes between Samsung and 2 Sprint throughout the Complaint. Additionally, she does not allege that Sprint engaged
3 in any misconduct, or that it colluded with Samsung in any way.

4 5 B. Motion to Dismiss

6
7 A motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) tests the legal 8 sufficiency of the claims asserted in the complaint. The issue on a motion to dismiss for 9 failure to state a claim is not whether the claimant will ultimately prevail, but whether 10 the claimant is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims asserted. Gilligan v.
11 Jamco Dev. Corp., 108 F.3d 246, 249 (9th Cir. 1997). Rule 12(b)(6) is read in 12 conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires only a short and plain statement of the claim 13 showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). However,
14 “[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory 15 statements, do not suffice.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009). When 16 evaluating a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the district court must accept all material allegations
17 in the complaint as true and construe them in the light most favorable to the non-moving 18 party. Moyo v. Gomez, 32 F.3d 1382, 1384 (9th Cir. 1994). Dismissal of a complaint for 19 failure to state a claim is not proper where a plaintiff has alleged “enough facts to state a 20 claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 21 570 (2007). In keeping with this liberal pleading standard, the district court should 22 grant the plaintiff leave to amend if the complaint can possibly be cured by additional 23 factual allegations. Doe v. United States, 58 F.3d 494, 497 (9th Cir. 1995).

28 ///

1           1. Strict liability

2
3           Ms. Carwile does not oppose Samsung's motion to dismiss her strict liability
4 claim. Accordingly, the Court grants Samsung's motion to dismiss this claim.

5
6           2. Breach of Express Warranty and Contract

7
8           Samsung next moves to dismiss Ms. Carwile's claims for breach of express 9 warranty and breach of contract. Ms. Carwile's breach of contract claim is based on the 10 same warranty forming the basis of her breach of express warranty (the "Warranty") 11 claim. "To plead a claim for breach of express warranty, the buyer must allege that the 12 seller (1) made an affirmation of fact or promise or provided a description of its goods;
13 (2) the promise or description formed part of the basis of the bargain; (3) the express 14 warranty was breached; and (4) the breach caused injury to the plaintiff." Stearns v.
15 Select Comfort Retail Corp., 763 F. Supp. 2d 1128, 1142 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (internal 16 quotations omitted). A copy of the Warranty is attached to the Complaint. In relevant 17 parts, it states:

18
19           SAMSUNG TELECOMMUNICATIONS AMERICA, LLC ("SAMSUNG")
20 warrants to the first consumer purchaser ("Purchaser") that SAMSUNG's 21 handsets and accessories ("Products") are free from defects in material and 22 workmanship under normal use and service for the period commencing upon the 23 date of purchase . . . .

24
25           To obtain service under this Limited Warranty, you must return the Product to an 26 authorized phone service facility in an adequate container for shipping . . . . To 27 obtain assistance on where to deliver the Product, please call SAMSUNG
28 Customer Care at 1-888-987-4357.

1
2 (Compl. Exh. A at 15, 17.) The Warranty does not define the term “authorized phone 3 service facility.”

4
5 Samsung argues that the Court should dismiss Ms. Carwile’s breach of contract
6 and breach of warranty claims because Ms. Carwile has failed to allege that she satisfied
7 a contractual precondition to her claims. Specifically, it argues that she fails to plead 8 that she returned her phone to an “authorized phone service facility” for repair or 9 replacement. Ms. Carwile contends that she fulfilled this obligation by alleging that she 10 took her phone to the Sprint Store on two occasions for repair or replacement. She 11 alleges that “it was Samsung’s custom to inform customers to take their phones to their 12 local phone carriers for service.” (Compl. ¶ 36.) Ms. Carwile further alleges that 13 “Samsung’s and the retail seller’s actions shows that under all applicable laws and a 14 reasonable construction of such warranties, phone carrier entities [such as Sprint] are 15 phone service facilities authorized by Samsung for purposes of compliance with any 16 express warranty obligations . . . . Plaintiff complied with any warranty’s [sic] 17 preconditions based on how the term ‘authorized phone service facility’ has been 18 applied and used by Samsung.” (Id. ¶ 37.) Under the liberal pleading standards of Rule 19 8, these allegations are sufficient to show that she satisfied the contractual precondition
20 that she return her phone to an “authorized phone service facility.” Though the parties
21 dispute whether the Sprint Store in fact qualifies as an “authorized phone service 22 facility,” that issue cannot be resolved on a motion to dismiss.

23
24 Samsung’s reliance on Taliaferro v. Samsung Telecommunications Am., LLC, No.
25 3:11-CV-1119-D, 2012 WL 169704 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 19, 2012) is inapposite. In 26 Taliaferro, the court dismissed the complaint because the plaintiffs failed to plead that 27 they returned their phones to an “authorized phone service facility,” a condition 28 precedent contained in their phones’ warranties. The court reasoned that although the

1 plaintiffs pleaded that they had returned their phones to a wireless carrier, they did not
2 specifically allege that the wireless carrier was an “authorized phone service facility.”
3 Id. at 3. Although the plaintiff in Taliaferro brought similar claims as Ms. Carwile, the 4 cases are distinguishable. Most importantly, unlike the complaint in Taliaferro, Ms.
5 Carwile has specifically alleged that the Sprint Store is an “authorized phone service
6 facility” under the terms of the express warranty. As discussed above, such allegations 7 are sufficient to overcome a motion to dismiss.

8
9 Samsung additionally argues that the Complaint contains inconsistent statements
10 regarding whether the Sprint Store is an “authorized phone service facility.”
11 Specifically, it contends that Ms. Carwile cannot allege that the Sprint Store is an 12 “authorized phone service facility,” while simultaneously alleging that Samsung’s only 13 authorized phone service facility is located in Texas, (Compl. ¶ 78). Though the Court 14 recognizes the potentially inconsistent nature of these allegations, the Federal Rules of 15 Civil Procedure “explicitly authorize litigants to present alternative and inconsistent 16 pleadings.” Molsbergen v. United States, 757 F.2d 1016, 1018 (9th Cir. 1985).

18 Samsung further contends that Ms. Carwile’s breach of express warranty and 19 contract claims fail because she asserts a design defect, whereas the Warranty only 20 covers “defects in material and workmanship.” Courts have held that warranties 21 covering defects in “material and workmanship” do not cover design defects. See, e.g.,
22 Horvath v. LG Electronics Mobilecomm U.S.A., Inc., No. 3:11-CV-01576-H-RBB, 2012
23 WL 2861160, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 13, 2012); In re Toyota Motor Corp. Unintended
24 Acceleration Mktg., Sales Practices, & Products Liab. Litig., 754 F. Supp. 2d at 1180–
25 81; Brothers v. Hewlett–Packard Co., No. C–06–2254 RMW, 2007 WL 485979, at *4
26 (N.D.Cal. Feb. 12, 2007). Here, however, Ms. Carwile does not limit her allegations to 27 design defects. Instead, she specifically alleges that the “Samsung Galaxy contains a 28 ///

1 manufacturing defect causing the phones to randomly freeze, shut down, and power-off
2 while in standby mode, rendering the phones inoperable and unfit for their intended use
3 and purpose.” (Compl. ¶ 56) (emphasis added.)
4

5 2. Breach of Implied Warranty

6

7 Samsung moves to dismiss the claim for breach of an implied warranty, arguing
8 that Ms. Carwile has failed to allege that she is in vertical privity with Samsung. As a 9 general rule, a plaintiff must stand in “vertical privity” with a defendant in order to 10 bring an implied warranty of merchantability claim. See Anunziato v. eMachines, Inc., 11 402 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1141 (C.D. Cal. 2005). Ms. Carwile argues that she is not 12 required to allege vertical privity because her implied warranty claims are brought under 13 the Song-Beverly Act, which does away with such a requirement. See Gonzalez v.
14 Drew Indus. Inc., 750 F. Supp. 2d 1061, 1072 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (“[T]he plain language
15 of the Song-Beverly Act . . . has been interpreted by a sister district court in this district 16 as explicitly imposing an implied warranty on manufacturers as well as retail sellers.”).
17 However, the Complaint contains two separate claims for breach of implied warranty, 18 one under the Song-Beverly Act, (Compl. ¶¶ 97–106), and one presumably brought 19 under the California Commercial Code, (id. ¶¶ 86–96). Although the privity 20 requirement applies to claims under the Commercial Code, courts have recognized an 21 exception where a plaintiff-consumer is an intended third-party beneficiary of a contract
22 for sale of a good between a manufacturer and a dealer. See Gilbert Fin. Corp. v.
23 Steelform Contracting Co., 82 Cal. App. 3d 65, 69–70 (1978) (finding that consumer 24 could sue subcontractor for breach of implied warranty as a third-party beneficiary of 25 subcontractor’s implied warranty to general contractor). Here, Ms. Carwile expressly 26 alleges that she purchased her phone from the Sprint Store, an authorized Samsung
27 retailer of phones, and that she is a “third-party beneficiar[y] of, and substantially 28 benefited from,” contracts between Samsung and the Sprint Store to sell such phones.

(Compl. ¶ 90.) These allegations are sufficient to overcome the privity requirement on a motion to dismiss. See Horvath v. LG Electronics Mobilecomm U.S.A., Inc., 3:11-CV-01576-H-RBB, 2012 WL 2861160, at *7 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 13, 2012) (denying a motion to dismiss based on lack of privity where plaintiffs who alleged a claim for breach of an implied warranty related to a cell phone raised questions of fact regarding whether plaintiffs were intended beneficiaries); In re Toyota Motor Corp. Unintended Acceleration Mktg., Sales Practices, & Products Liab. Litig., 754 F. Supp. 2d at 1185 (excusing the lack of privity under the third-party beneficiary exception where plaintiffs alleged they were the intended consumers of Toyota vehicles purchased from dealerships).<sup>2</sup>

3. Common Counts

Samsung moves to dismiss Ms. Carwile's common counts for assumpsit and quasi-contract, arguing that they are precluded by the existence of the Warranty. In Paracor, the Ninth Circuit noted that under California law, there can be no action in quasi-contract where there is a binding agreement defining the rights of the parties. Paracor Fin., Inc. v. Gen. Elec. Capital Corp., 96 F.3d 1151, 1167 (9th Cir. 1996); see Taliaferro, 2012 WL 169704 at *9 ("A party can plead legal and equitable claims in the alternative, but only when one party disputes the existence of a contract governing the dispute."). Here, it is undisputed that Ms. Carwile and Samsung are parties to the Warranty, a binding contract governing the subject matter forming the basis of this action. Accordingly, the Court dismisses Ms. Carwile's common counts.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Samsung also moves to dismiss the breach of implied warranty claim on the basis that Ms. Carwile did not provide Samsung the opportunity to repair or replace her phone. However, Ms. Carwile has satisfied this obligation by pleading that she took her phone to the Sprint Store, which she alleges is a Samsung "authorized phone service facility."

<sup>3</sup> Samsung additionally moves to dismiss Ms. Carwile's claims for violations of the Song-Beverly Warranty Act, Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, and the UCL. Its arguments for dismissal are premised on its contention that Ms. Carwile has failed to plead that the Sprint Store is an "authorized phone
